

Transfleet Equipment Ltd

NZTTMF Member Since:

Transfleet was founded in 1983 by Dave and Margaret Gillies and today, more than 30 years on, remains—proudly—100% New Zealand owned.

However, there have been changes. From the company's first single aluminium tipper, Transfleet states they now offer aluminium trailers live stock standard or purpose-built for every possible application in New Zealand.

Included among that muster: • Big Smoothy® Aluminium Dump Bodies • Traditional Multiple Piece Construction • Hook Bin Refuse Equipment • Clip Chip® Panel Monocoque Bulk Wood Chip Bodies and Trailers • Clip Chip® Heavy Duty Panel Monocoque Bulk Refuse Equipment. • Clip Chip® Panel Monocoque Livestock Bodies and Trailers • ROC-TUFF High Strength/High Wear Resistance steel dump truck bodies. The company also specialises in chassis and gear frames. Both high tensile and 350 steels are available, depending on application and suspension.

The company has been at the forefront of moving floor technology introducing the concept to NZ in the early 90s.

Augmenting the product range, the company offers a full range of ancillary services, including a stand-alone service division and allied parts service. Truck sales are gaining prominence and the company's website usually has a range of new and used trucks on offer.

The Transfleet website is also worth a visit for an enviable list of "legendary firsts" accomplished by this innovative company in its 30 year history. That list is a historical record not only of the progress of the company but also, in many cases, the progress of the transport industry itself.

Transfleet is proud to be at the forefront of that progress, through continuing and total commitment to innovation and evolution.
