

Koromiko Engineering Ltd

NZTTMF Member Since: 2000

Koromiko is a heavy transport engineering company, based in Mt Maunganui.

It has a 40-year history, which is impressive in itself. But, what really makes it a company with a strong and loyal customer base and an enviable reputation is its “open” operational philosophy.

One of the two current partners in the business, Derek Haywood (the other is Shane Valois, son of founder Ron Valois) says the company is open to anything. That may be trailer building from scratch, heavily customised to customer requirements; fabrication, re-engineering of OEM, and repairs..

In that respect, Koromiko can be characterised as the epitome of the “can do” approach that is the cornerstone of our industry in particular and the country in general.

Koromiko has a fully-equipped workshop and highly skilled and experienced staff (Derek has been with the company for 35 years, Shane for 25 years). Shane is in charge of the workshop; Derek handles the design and admin side.

If they have a specialisation, it is customisation. That open approach they have would suggest that Koromiko will have a go at just about anything. And evidence of that is a list of built for purpose trailers noted for its diversity and versatility.

Koromiko’s production includes tippers, loggers, crane trucks, curtainsiders, dump trucks and just about everything else on the road (and off-road) today.

Contact Derek or Shane to discuss your requirements. Chances are they have already built it, and—if not—they will.

WHO: Koromiko Engineering Co. Ltd

WHERE: Mt Maunganui.

WHAT: General engineers with an emphasis on customisation.

WEBSITE: Under construction.

EMAIL: koroeng@xtra.co.nz

PHONE: +64 7 5755689.

WHO TO ASK FOR: Derek Haywood or Shane Valois.

WHAT TO ASK FOR: Just about anything you want.

